Glen joined EJE in 1996 after working in a London Architectural practice and was appointed to the position of Associate in 1999.

At EJE Glen has been the project architect on a diverse range of projects including several Public Works school projects up to the value of $20M. His excellence in architecture has earned several design awards over the years including the following: The 2005 Lower Hunter Civic Design Awards Charles Davis Award for Small Scale Commercial Development, Merit in the Bill Hudson Award for Small Scale Residential Development. The 2001 Bill Hudson Award for Small Scale Residential Development; The 2001 Charles Davis Award for Small Scale Commercial Development, The 2000 UDIA Award for Energy Efficiency, The 2001 Local and National MBA Excellence in Housing Awards; and the 2000 Local and National MBA Energy Efficiency & Sustainable Development Award.

Glen has a special affinity with environmentally responsible design including passive solar design, energy efficiency and Ecologically Sustainable Development (ESD) and has successfully integrated these aspects into his designs.
